

Asymptotic enumeration of graphs by degree sequence

Anita Liebenau

How many graphs are there with a given degree sequence? This talk describes three methods that answer this question asymptotically, with each method being useful for different densities and degree ranges. Special emphasis is placed on the recent method using degree switchings and contractive operators. We then describe more applications of the method to find the number of bipartite graphs and hypergraphs of a given degree sequence.